

GROWING AGAINST THE GRAIN

“ During recent years, your bank has seen tremendous growth and become much more complex. ”

BETSY LAWER | CHAIR AND CEO

DEAR SHAREHOLDER:

You have many reasons to be proud of your bank.

Let’s start with five “Best of Alaska Business” awards. This year we were humbled when readers of Alaska Business magazine voted for First National as the “Best Place to Work” in the 250-plus employees category for the second year in a row. The voters added four other “Best of” awards, including Best Customer Service, Best Corporate Citizen, Best Advertising Campaign, and Best Family-Owned Business.

On a national level, First National was chosen by MSN.com as the Most Admired Company in Alaska.

You can be proud that bank employees stepped up to meet the challenge of a changing economy during the year. Thanks to hard work, a seasoned management team, and intentional strategies the bank continued to grow against the grain, finding success even during the state’s recession. Total assets grew by $43.3 million to $3.65 billion; gross loans increased by $137.6 million to $1.82 billion; deposits, including securities sold under agreement to repurchase, increased by $19.24 million to $3.12 billion.

Well-planned and -executed strategies led to net income of $36.4 million or $114.87 per share; or $42.7 million or $134.73 per share when adjusted for expenses related to the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act. The bank garnered greater tax benefits with select forward funded contributions, by transacting these before the new tax law went into effect in 2018.

During recent years, your bank has seen tremendous growth and become much more complex. Your management team has learned there are a variety of levers we can adjust to help us achieve our strategic goals. Going forward, we look forward to supporting the creativity of customers as they adapt to the new economic realities. I am confident Alaskans are up to the task, just as they always have been.

This ability of the bank to adapt and adjust helped us perform well for shareholders. Highlights for the last year included increased income and stock price, a proposed 10-for-1 stock split and the intent to increase dividends in 2018.

Many years ago, my grandfather established a four-point mission statement that has not only fueled your bank’s growth over decades, but has continued to serve as an overarching strategy. That is, if we take care of our employees, take care of our customers, and give back to the communities where we do business, you, the shareholders, will be well-served.

Thank you for your continued confidence in First National Bank Alaska.

Alaska Business magazine "Best of Alaska Business" Awards

In one sense, going against the grain means performing contrary to what's generally assumed.

GROWING AGAINST THE GRAIN means you're succeeding when a number of factors indicate that's going to be a demanding task. This report and the stories shared show how First National and some of our customers were able to grow against the backdrop of a difficult and challenging economy.

Accounting Supervisor Amy Salvador is First National Proud surrounded by the natural splendor of Denali National Park.

FINANCIAL HIGHLIGHTS

First National's performance is a combination of bank customers responding to statewide economic conditions and our bank executive team's resolve to lead the competitive financial services landscape. Both groups influenced the bank's strong financial performance to shareholders. Federal tax reform was signed before year end; the financial statements of banks across the nation, including First National's, were affected by the legislation.

The bank's total assets grew $43.3 million to $3.65 billion. Customer deposits and other liabilities increased $39.2 million and the shareholders' equity grew $4.1 million. Low deposit growth is reflective of the stagnant Alaska economy, now in recession since fourth quarter 2015. Noninterest bearing deposits decreased during 2017 with higher growth in interest bearing accounts as the rate environment began to improve for depositors.

Loans increased $137.6 million to $1.82 billion, an 8.2 percent growth on lending activity both within and outside Alaska. The bank's strategy to increase loans to total assets resulted in a 4 percent improvement in that ratio to 48 percent. Additional loan volume improved interest income on earning assets by $4.1 million and net interest margin by 9 basis points to 3.64 percent.

Net income before deductions and adjustments related to tax reform was $42.7 million. Core performance was defined by solid growth in net interest income and expense management for improved efficiency. The loan portfolio remained high quality with minimal delinquency and nonaccrual loans. Noninterest income on bankcard and deposit services continued to provide core income as consumers' product and behavior preferences evolve. The bank introduced expanded technology features while reducing operating expenses and delivering high-value services to customers. First National's efficiency ratio was reduced to 55 cents spent to earn each dollar of revenue.

Final net of income at $36.4 million was impacted by tax reform as the bank strategically took discretionary expenses to maximize the benefit of deductions in the period with higher margin tax rates. Future lower tax rates also required the bank to devalue net deferred tax assets and future benefits from low-income housing investments to reflect the drop in corporate rates from 35 percent to 21 percent. Shareholders' equity will regain these adjustments through the reduction of future income tax expense within one year.

The bank continues our mission to achieve first quartile standing among national banks in our peer group and deliver improving performance to our shareholders through services trusted and valued by customers.

GROWING AGAINST THE GRAIN

Succeeding in business in Alaska can be a daunting task in a favorable economic climate. So making progress when you're facing the challenge of a changing economy takes all the experience, skill and resources a business can muster. First National Bank Alaska used all of these attributes to its advantage in 2017, showing growth in deposits, loans and assets.

Drawing on nearly a century of experience in dealing with the ups and downs of Alaska's economy, the bank's board of directors and management team has expertly devised a multi-year plan to navigate the state's uncertain fiscal waters, while maintaining the flexibility to respond quickly to a changing economic environment.

With the stability of this plan in place, First National uses its resources of $3.6 billion in assets and more than 650 loyal, service-driven employees to help other local businesses succeed in demanding times. You'll find a few of these Alaska success stories in the following pages.

There's something else we share with these customers – the knowledge that to grow against the grain, we need to work together for our mutual success. Fortunately, pulling together in tough times has always been part of the Great Land's legacy. That's one reason why we believe in Alaska.

EXCEEDING EXPECTATIONS

When setting loan and deposit goals for 2017, First National management knew the challenging year they faced: an economy still sputtering in a recession, a less-than-ideal rate environment and increasing competition. Still, they didn't shy away from setting ambitious growth targets for both categories. They understood that stretching to reach a goal often brings out the best in us all.

The best did, indeed, come to the forefront. First National not only reached those goals, we exceeded them.

TOTEM INN (l to r) Totem Inn co-owners Mike Williams and Connie Ballow with Will Stark, First National Vice President and Valdez Branch Manager.

TOTEM INN Since 1972, one of the first sights when driving into Valdez has been the Totem Inn. Over the years, the well-loved restaurant and motel became a landmark in the Prince William Sound community. So when a fire in 2016 made the original building unusable, it was time for co-owners Mike Williams and Connie Ballow to make a decision.

Rebuild the 45-year-old building? Tear it down and operate a smaller business? Or construct a bigger, better hotel? Williams and Ballow had seen their visitor industry business expand even during Alaska's economic downturn, so they decided to construct a new three-story, 65-room hotel, choosing First National for the financing.

Another decision loomed. The owners and First National both wanted to use a state economic development agency for the long-term financing. But waiting for that commitment might mean the new building would not be ready for the 2018 summer season. First National, using their local knowledge and decision-making, quickly approved the construction loan to keep the project on schedule. The new Totem Inn will be ready for this season's visitors.

"That decision was relatively easy," said Valdez Branch Manager Will Stark. "Mike and Connie have been business customers for more than 30 years, using our commercial deposit accounts and online banking. Just like First National, they're in it for the long haul. When we say 'We Believe in Alaska,' it's because of people like Mike Williams and Connie Ballow— people who have the determination and faith in Alaska's future to put in the hard work it takes to succeed."

PHILLIPS CRUISES AND TOURS When two of Alaska’s iconic businesses joined forces in 2017, who knew it would make waves?

Phillips Cruises & Tours has shown visitors and locals alike some of Alaska’s finest Prince William Sound scenery since the late 1950s. They recently came on board with First National, which has been helping businesses like Phillips succeed for nearly a century.

The visitor industry has been a bright spot during Alaska’s recent economic doldrums. Despite challenges in Alaska’s economy, Phillips saw an opportunity to expand operations and purchased a catamaran that needed overhauling. With a business plan in hand for the renovations, they came to First National and it was full speed ahead on the financing. The bank also provides business checking and savings services to Phillips to help keep the tour company on an even keel.

Like First National, Phillips remains a leader in its industry. They were one of the first to use high-speed catamarans to transport guests in style and comfort. Their goal is to provide the best in convenience, service and value to their customers.

Loan Officer Zac Hays said it best. “When it comes to giving customers superlative service, Phillips and First National are in the same boat.”

PHILLIPS CRUISES AND TOURS First National Vice President Zac Hays (l) with Bob Neumann, co-owner of Phillips Cruises and Tours.

Loans increased by nearly $138 million, 8.2 percent overall. Branch and corporate lending provided $104 million of that growth, a 7.2 percent increase over 2017. Five of the seven bank regional divisions showed growth, the Mat-Su and Southeast Regions leading the way with 9 percent and 8 percent loan growth, respectively. The Kodiak Branch was the shining star, increasing the branch loan portfolio by $4.3 million, a 16 percent jump from 2016. Participation loans with Outside banks, part of a developing revenue strategy, grew to $45 million in 2017.

Although growth decelerated in 2017, the bank still saw a $19.2 million increase in deposits, including securities sold under agreement to repurchase. Again, five of the seven regions were on the positive side of the ledger, with the Kenai Peninsula Region at the top, showing an $11.2 million rise. Kodiak Branch was a standout in this category, too, showing a 21 percent increase over 2016, adding $18.1 million in deposits.

A main factor in these increases was the adaptive strategy set in place by First National management. By building in flexibility and the ability to adapt to changing economic conditions, the bank can use more than one way to reach strategic goals, as we did in 2017.

President Doug Longacre knows another key component of the bank’s success: “The economy is slow. Competition is fierce. Loan rates are low. We had a good plan in place to overcome these challenges, but you need the right people to put a plan in action. The dedication, knowledge and experience of the people I work alongside is unequalled. I’m not surprised – after working here for more than 40 years, I never expect anything less.”

GROWING TECHNOLOGY

The development and use of new online and mobile banking technology is one of the main facets of First National’s plan to continue growing in an uncertain economy. In addition to offering efficiencies, digital technology provides a higher level of convenience, service and value to business and personal customers.

In 2017, employees from several divisions collaborated to offer a suite of new services and enhance existing ones. These include:

FNBizApp | First National's business mobile banking app allows customers to bank on the go wherever their business takes them.

Mobile Check Deposit | Retail customers can deposit checks quickly and securely with just a few taps of their smartphone.

CardValet | This app gives personal and business account customers a wide range of control over their First National debit card transactions and limits.

Online Banking | Retail and business online banking both underwent substantial enhancements to increase ease of use and add new features.

Electronic Lockbox | Business customers can accelerate the collection of payments with this customizable product.

Using technology to create efficiencies is not just for bank customers. We've also committed to giving employees the latest tools to help streamline workflow. This includes the increased use of the Trust Department's trust accounting system, helping cut their expenses by 11 percent last year, and the Retail Banking and Cash Management Division's more efficient consumer loan tracking and processing system, among others. The division also debuted an online consumer loan application to better streamline the application process for the bank and its customers.

"The essence of business success is keeping customers satisfied," said Executive Vice President and Chief Information Officer Phil Griffin. "Today, that means giving them the means to bank safely and securely at their convenience. With our technology strategy, we're doing that while improving the bottom line. And that's the essence of a win-win."

NORTH POLE VETERINARY HOSPITAL (l to r) Dr. Denali Lovely, First National Vice President Jerry Walker and Patrick Lovely with an obviously contented canine customer.

NORTH POLE VETERINARY HOSPITAL When Denali and Patrick Lovely purchased a small veterinary clinic 12 years ago, they had a passion for helping animals and a strong desire to serve their community. They also had a prescription for success and were looking for a bank and banker who shared their vision and a commitment to participate in their efforts. That's when they were referred to First National Bank Alaska and Vice President Jerry Walker.

Today, the hospital employs more than 25 Alaskans. Getting to this point required new equipment, renovations, upgrading their practice to a digital environment, and much more. First National was there every step of the way, with real estate and equipment financing, lines of credit, online banking, cash management tools such as direct payroll deposit and a host of other services. This eased the complexities of growing from a one-doctor clinic to a five-doctor veterinary hospital.

With veterinarian employment projected to grow 19 percent by 2026, much faster than the average for many industries, Walker is enthusiastic about the future for the Lovelys. "They put an excellent plan together, continuing to execute and adjust it well depending on circumstances and opportunities. Working with Denali and Pat is a privilege and pleasure. Their commitment to their profession, the families of their patients and the community they serve continues to grow."

DENALI MATERIALS When the words “polymer modified asphalts” come up in discussion, a Native corporation located 450 miles west-northwest of Anchorage is probably not what springs to mind. Denali Materials and St. Mary’s Native Corporation (SMNC) are changing that conversation.

Denali Materials manufactured these asphalts for a number of high-profile projects, such as the JBER runway reconstruction, the Merrill Field expansion project, and several others. The company is one part of SMNC’s diversification efforts that include Imaq, an IT company, and SMNC Properties, LLC (SMP), a commercial and residential leasing and maintenance and construction business.

First National’s local expertise and quick decision-making have been part of the Native corporation’s efforts to expand. The bank provided a line of credit and holds the corporation’s deposit accounts. “It’s a pleasure to work with Denali and SMNC,” said Assistant Vice President Ligia Lutan. “They’ve earned a great reputation for professionalism and attention to detail.”

Even facing a still-uncertain Alaska economy, those qualities helped SMP with quick expansion opportunities. The subsidiary won two federal 8(a) contracts within days of each other, which the Small Business Administration says is nearly unheard of. The road ahead looks smooth, but if any financial rough patches show up, First National will be there to help pave the way.

MORE THAN $1 MILLION DISTRIBUTED TO ALASKANS

Alaska communities across the Great Land received more than $1 million in donations and community sponsorships in 2017. This included a donation to AWAIC’s capital campaign, and education and outreach programs. (l to r) First National Vice President Natasha Pope, AWAIC’s Executive Director Suzi Pearson and Development Director Becky More, and First National Marketing Manager Amy Tannahill.

MANAGING THE BRICK-AND-MORTAR

A natural consequence of the increased use of digital banking technology is a gradual reduction in customer traffic at branches and other bank facilities, resulting in an opportunity to better leverage underutilized space. In 2017, First National began applying a strategy to deliver a superior in-branch experience to customers and employees, and to help reduce expense and drive new sources of revenue.

This strategy led to consolidating Federal Branch operations in other nearby branches, placing the historic nine-story building in Anchorage up for sale, as required by the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC), and remodeling the Kodiak Branch to streamline lobby operations and free up rental space.

Re-evaluation of facilities use will be consistently be applied as customer behavior continues to evolve. After analyzing the three Fairbanks branches’ activity, the bank closed the Interior City Branch in March 2018. Employees were reassigned to other branches. This “rightsizing” of branches in the Golden Heart City will focus our service in the locations most convenient to our customers and, of course, reduce expense.
